ROTARY WHEELS

- ❖ Recently Jack Fleming attended the 60th anniversary of his class at Emory in Atlanta.
- ❖ Didjknow that Cliff Payne’s grandfather was part of the committee that succeeded in bringing Sacred Heart Hospital to Pensacola? And noting recent happenings at that hospital, Henry Roberts and Jimmy Jones now are working with a new president whose role not only covers a series of Gulf Coast hospitals but also several large ones in Connecticut.
- ❖ One of attorney Bob Hart’s extra duties is a corporation heat at First Presbyterian Church.
- ❖ Rober Vinson is a new granddad. It’s a girl.
- ❖ Bret Barrow, our good member who guides the symphony, is part of local culture whose first efforts came way back in 1926, when some military and townspeople first performed as the Pensacola Philharmonic Orchestra. They had 26 members and performed in the old Lee Square Pensacola High auditorium.
- ❖ Sorry that Ed Meadows and the girls had to settle for third place, but what a fine run they made. Pensacola’s sports teams do us all proud. And speaking of sports, we’ll bet that Jock Mobley may soon be using the new pro basketball star Jeremy Lin in his Volvo ads. Volvo has signed the Chinese player for commercials.
- ❖ Wonder if Andrea Farage is considering starting a male version of IMPACT? The ladies signed up over 700 participants (including our own Peit Hudson, who was photographed at the celebration). AND...quite a number of our male members have had family members as participants.
- ❖ Alan Bookman and Jim Hizer were among those who welcomed members of the state’s legal profession board as they convened here. Alan was a past state president.
